

Press Start News

Anchor 1:

Hello everybody, it's time for Press Start News!

Anchor 2:

Cold hard facts ONLY, coming straight to you.

Anchor 1:

It was a busy, chaotic week, so we have a lot to cover. Let's jump right into it. What do we have first, Anchor 2?

Anchor 2:

Well, first off, we have received word from our wire services that the United States Medical Complex intends on switching to a loot box system.

Anchor 1:

I see they are taking a page out of the lucrative book of EA and Blizzard. So, what does this mean for us, the common man on the street, my good friend?

Anchor 2:

For a small subscription fee, American Citizens can expect to receive monthly medical loot boxes containing such goodies as crutches, opioids, stethoscopes, coupons for CAT scans, and even holographic kidney transplants.

Anchor 1:

So this means everyone has a chance of getting what they need!

Equity for all.

Anchor 2:

If you receive duplicates of an item, say maybe two ice packs, you can trade them in to receive hospital points. These can be collected and redeemed for an item of your choosing! Me, personally? I'm saving up for my bi-weekly liver Dialysis. Hope

I get it!

Anchor 1:

You're irreplaceable, Anchor 2. I hope you get it too! I hear they are doing a special event with Halloween themed loot boxes this month. Hope I get the limited edition items like the preserved brain, used amputation equipment, and unsterilized needles! OOOOO Spooky!!

Anchor 2:

What else do we have going on?

Anchor 1:

Well, Battlefield 2042 is coming out! The completely apolitical game featuring climate change, over-reliance on mercenary militaries, and the military industrial process run amok!

Anchor 2:

The game is known for it's realism, but this time, they're taking it to the next level.

Anchor 1:

For the next installment in EA's war-simulator, purchase of the game will require a full day of diagnostic physical testing and aptitude tests to determine one's eligibility to play.

Anchor 2:

Sorry to anyone who is colorblind! You're ineligible for service.

Anchor 1:

Let's hope that if you want to play, you don't have asthma!

Anchor 2:

Although there's word that if not enough people qualify they might quietly start reducing the entry requirements. Or even a draft.

Anchor 1:

Well, let's hope not! For now, let's just hope EA is also willing to pay your college tuition for a combat tour.

Anchor 2:

Me? I plan on taking out the biggest life insurance policy possible and just driving off a cliff a couple hundred times in game and getting a fat pay day.

Anchor 1:

Alrighty, next up - we have Sora in Smash bros! The collaboration we all thought was too crazy to happen.

Anchor 2:

We're all excited to see the new Kingdom Hearts character appear fighting along side Steve, Bayonetta, Dr. Mario and Toon Link.

According to Mr. Sakurai, the game's lead producer, this character received the most requests to be added in to the game.

Anchor 1:

However, there may be dark times ahead for the legendary Nintendo studios. During the trailer, we caught a glimpse of the fabled Mickey Mouse ear keychain, a financial investment that we may never see pay off in our lifetime.

Anchor 2:

As we know, Disney is notoriously stingy when it comes to their I.P's. This short clip cost an estimated 300 billion dollars. In an interview, Sakurai was rumored to have said, "This will ensure I never have to deal with making a smash game ever again", laughing maniacally as he edited the trailer.

Anchor 1:

Maybe that's why Sora was saved for last - they knew that if he was first, they wouldn't have enough money to make more DLC characters.

Anchor 2:

It's quite possible indeed. Either way, gamers are happy to see the fan-favorite arrive onto the scene in style.

Anchor 1:

Lastly, it's time for some local news. We've received word that for Halloween, a lazy gamer intends on dressing up as a palette swap of himself. Here's the word on the street.

(footage of interview)

Anchor 2:

And that's about it for this week of Press Start news. We hope everyone has a pleasant week.

Anchor 1:

Also, a fair warning to the residents of Animal Crossing Island "A A A A A" - expect to see the remnants of Hurricane Kirby on late Sunday evening. Be prepared and stock up on water! We'll see you next week folks.

Anchor 2:

Bye!